Committing to the Writer's Life

Sunday, May 27, 2018 • 2 pm

Book Passage • 51 Tamal Vista Blvd • Corte Madera

As a writer, committing to our writing is often where the true battle lies. Whether you've strayed away from your New Year's resolution, or are simply waiting for the right inspiration to build some momentum, it's never too late to recommit to your writing!

This month we're hosting an informal and relaxed Writer's Circle, where we'll connect and share our strategies and tactics for committing to the writing life. Come join us for some practical tips and tricks, and share what has worked for you. We'll also discuss setting goals for ourselves as authors, and take some time to share our victories and challenges. Let's leave with a clear plan of action for putting pen to paper so that we can best achieve our writing goals!

Hosted by Mary Krefting
President, California Writers Club Marin

"We're going to tackle a topic brought up during our Marin Writers Conference in April — setting goals for ourselves as writers. My goal is simply to finish my novel, yet this feels elusive at times, with the many obligations and distractions getting in the way. And yet, great things can be achieved with a little determination and smart planning. So let's come together to set concrete goals that are achievable for ourselves, and share strategies and tips for committing to our writing, with one another."

MEETINGS: $5 MEMBERS • $10 NON-MEMBERS
