Spud Hilton has worked for the San Francisco Chronicle since 2000 and for almost two years at the Hearst-owned San Francisco Examiner before that. As the Travel editor, he produces the weekly Sunday Travel section's print edition, as well as travels, writes and takes photos and video for the section and for his Bad Latitude travel blog at SFGate.com. In his 15 years in the Travel section, he's written about, reported on, and been hopelessly lost on six continents, and his section and stories — from Havana's back alleys to Kyoto's shrines to the floor of a hippie bus in Modesto — have earned 10 Lowell Thomas Awards.

He will be speaking about "All Things Travel Writing."
